This afternoon we visit All Saints Church at Kingston. The building was originally the Commissariat Store and is one of the best examples of Georgian architecture in this area of the world. The complex consists of the main building and several outbuildings within a high wall, and was completed in 1835. The main building's ground floor contained an office, meals room and store. The first floor housed an engineer's store, and the third floor a grain store. The basement contained a liquor store and a general store. In 1874 the building was converted to a church by removing the first floor to create a double-storey space and is used as the All Saints Anglican Church today. You'll be able to sing in this historic church this afternoon as your accompanist plays the organ. We will practice songs for Remembrance Day.
